OPINION AND COMMENT

What the University Is Asking For

In its last issue THE REVIEW set forth in general terms what the University was asking of the legislature for the next biennium. Since then, the definite figures have been furnished the alumni through a special pamphlet entitled Budget Requests, 1923-25, sent out by the Alumni Secretary. For convenience the detailed analyses of the requests are summarized on another page, and, likewise for convenience, the totals are stated here: $2,317,380 was asked for buildings during the biennium, and $715,175 for 1923-24 and $765,040 for 1924-25 for maintenance.

The Budget Commission's Answer

The answer of the Budget Commission, which was presented in a lengthy summary covering all State institutions and undertakings, was reported to the legislature on January 20. According to the report $1,650,000 (a cut of $667,380) is recommended as a building fund for the University; $650,000 (a cut of 65,175) is recommended for maintenance for 1923-24; and $675,000 (a cut of $90,040) for 1924-25.

On the day following the submission of the report Raleigh papers carried the statement that although the Commission had signed the general report, the right had been reserved by one member to advocate the further cutting of items in the recommendations for various institutions, and that a similar opinion was held by other members of the Commission.

President Chase's Statement

On the receipt of the answer made by the Commission, President Chase issued the following statement:

The report of the Budget Commission shows clearly that the program entered upon two years ago for the expansion of the State's institutions is to be continued, and it is gratifying to see that funds are available to make this possible on a sound basis, with provision for the setting up of a sinking fund to retire the bonds provided to cover the cost of permanent improvements.

For the spirit of the Commission's report there will, I am sure, be hearty approval. North Carolina is rapidly coming to regard her institutions of higher education as opportunities for the wise investment of public funds, from which she may confidently expect immense returns.

At the same time the University finds itself, so far as the maintenance recommendations of the Commission are concerned, in a difficult situation. The maintenance budget which was laid before the Commission was the result of weeks of careful study and of conferences with every department and administrative officer of the institution. The final figures which were laid before the Commission were the result of a serious attempt to state the lowest amount on which this important branch of the State's business could be adequately conducted for the next two years. The whole request, before it went to the Commission, had been cut and trimmed to the lowest point at which it seemed safe to undertake the task.

A cut of ten per cent in a budget so closely calculated is a serious matter. The quality of instruction given to students must, of course, be maintained. But, in addition to this, the University is being called upon to render a great many services such as the extension of its summer school to twelve weeks, in response to a demand from the teachers of the State; the building up of its extension work, which cannot at present meet adequately anything like the demands upon it; the strengthening of its library to meet the increased demands upon it by students and faculty.

And, obviously, the more building operations it conducts the larger must be its funds for upkeep of its grounds and for the keeping in condition of its material plant. A ten per cent reduction in a budget already reduced to the lowest terms compatible with business-like operation means that the University must hold back and sacrifice many important lines of service during the two-year period.

The building fund which is recommended is an increase of $160,000 over that available for the last two-year period. This is gratifying, but I do not believe that the seriousness of the material conditions at the University is generally recognized. In the housing and teaching of students the University is relatively where it was two years ago, except that it has made considerable progress in cleaning up the overcrowded conditions in its dormitory rooms. Aside from this it has not gained appreciably on the situation. I have not yet had time to consider the matter carefully, but I suspect that if the Commission's recommendations are followed it will be necessary, in order to keep up with the rising tide of increasing numbers, to spend the entire sum in new construction, leaving nothing for the reworking of the old buildings on the campus, which are in very bad shape and urgently need a thorough renovation and fireproofing.

To mention another item, the University urgently needs a permanent water supply, with a reservoir and dam. For the past two years it has been able to open in the fall only through the installation of temporary lines. Such a permanent supply would be expensive, and with the absolutely necessary building construction I do not now see how it is possible, nor can a number of other important improvements be made which are badly needed at once.

The Budget Commission has done a careful and laborious piece of work, and, as I have said, with the spirit of its report there will be hearty agreement. But I do think that the public should know just the situation in which its recommendations would result so far as the progress of the University during the next two years is concerned.

A Further Word

The foregoing statement by President Chase does not require any elaboration on the part of THE REVIEW. However, THE REVIEW does want to emphasize certain facts concerning the requests made of the legislature, and the effect the reduction will inevitably have if they stand as reported.

THE REVIEW has recently had occasion to contrast the way in which the work of the University is carried on now and that, say, of six or ten years ago. President Chase refers to the change in his report (copies of which are now being mailed to alumni). Time was when the president and the executive committee handled all the business affairs of the University and the general faculty legislated, in the main, concerning the curriculum. Today, every school or division of the University is organized under its special faculty and administrative board or directorate, and the heads of these boards meet regularly every two weeks with the president and other administrative officers. As a result, every phase of the University's work receives first the closest scrutiny of the individual school or department which it particularly concerns, and then is reviewed by the central administrative committee.

It is in this manner that the present budget for buildings and maintenance has been arrived at. Exact methods have been employed in making it out, and it represents what the University must have if it does the work which North Carolina, through its high schools, its teachers, its classes of business men, its women's clubs, its civic organizations, and its offices of State, is demanding of it. It has asked for nothing but that which the necessities of the State require, and on which the State can confidently look for a definite, profitable return.

What the Cut Will Do

There are still other things about the recommendation that we wish to say. Some three or four years ago the editor of this publication was called on, among others, to meet with the Trustees of the University of South Carolina who were on an inspection trip to the University. We explained to the group the way in which the Library was administered, went into the plans and details of the Extension work, pointed out what function THE REVIEW performs in the life of the alumni and the University, and then sat in with the visitors at dinner in Swain Hall to see how the University handled that plant. Everything up to this point went smoothly. On the way back from the dining hall one of the visitors asked us if we would show him through the old dormitories. We clutched desperately at our heart, gasped, staggered, and tried to feign heart failure, in order to escape. But to no avail. We knocked on the door of a room in Old West, watched the expression of amazement spread over the countenance of the visitor, heard him ask the occupants, "Where do you bathe?", heard their answer, "In the Gym," and then broke out on to the campus to hear his verdict: "The boys at Columbia would not live in such quarters."

We also remember Paul Whitlock's report to Governor Morrison two years ago; and what we remember most vividly of all is that in the summers of 1921 and 1922 these same century-old, bathtub-less-woefully-out-of-repair dormitories—Old East, Old West, the South Building—were crowded by North Carolina women who had taught nine months in North Carolina schoolrooms and were having to spend their vacation attending Summer School.

To our mind that is the limit, but it is the sort of thing that the cut in the building budget must inevitably entail. It is the price in physical discomfort which the women teachers of North Carolina youth must pay when every dollar has to be spent for space rather than space and proper equipment. If the cut stands, it is inevitable that a choice will have to be made, and, judging from the past, the things that are and have been, some of them for 128 years, will have to remain as they are and were!

Shall We Stand and Wait and Hope, or Shall We Serve?

THE REVIEW is also mindful of what a maintenance budget is like from which an allotment for contingencies and new undertakings is largely eliminated. In the University it is inevitable that the first consideration is instruction. That will have to be maintained and will be maintained. But plans of development, possibilities which arise in a living organism such as the University is, which call for instant action if they are to yield their finest results, will have to wait. And, in many instances, die! As Shakespeare said, "there's the rub."

This institution, this University of North Carolina that has blessed and is blessing the State in countless ways, and which today has the opportunity of enlarging its usefulness to a growing, forward-pushing citizenship, will, if the sort of cut indicated is made, to that extent, have to stand and wait and hope, instead of serve!

The President's Report

As this issue of THE REVIEW reaches the alumni it will be accompanied by a copy of President Chase's Report to the Trustees. Although comment is made elsewhere on the report, every alumnus is urged to read it from the beginning to end. It summarizes in a most striking way the work of the University for the past two years, and sets forth the nature of the task to which the University must commit itself in the future. It is not a long document, it is conveniently paragraphed, it tells an absorbingly interesting story of an institution which is making about the liveliest history we know of, and it is sent to you, fellow alumni, to be read!

J. Bryan Grimes

Usefulness, efficiency, loyalty—these were the three characteristics of the late J. Bryan Grimes which so distinctly stamp his personality upon the State. One editorial writer listed him among "the five most useful and patriotic men in North Carolina"; another was deeply impressed by the fact that in a long and successful political career, his "only machine" was a record of efficient public service; while all who knew him paid tribute to his sense of loyalty.

Nothing which effects the welfare of North Carolina—politics, agriculture, transportation problems, history and literature, education—was foreign to his interest; every institution which he served—the State Government, the North Carolina Agricultural Society, the North Carolina Good Roads Association, the North Carolina Historical Commission, the University of North Carolina—is more useful to the people of North Carolina today because of his passion for efficient service; while hundreds of men and women in all parts of North Carolina today are happier because of memories of his unflinching loyalty to friends, convictions, and ideals.

His Alma Mater is daily witnessing in her own life and work concrete evidence of these three characteristics of her son. He was the first member of the Board of Trustees to insist that the old haphazard methods of campus development should yield to a definite carefully thought-out plan. The present building committee, of which he was chairman and to the work of which he gave so liberally of his time and thought, was the result of his suggestion and persistent advocacy. Steadfastness in his convictions of the right in a student-faculty controversy during his student days, prevented his graduation from the University, but his broad tolerance of honest differences of opinion—another striking characteristic of the man—did not permit that fact to dim in a single degree his affection and loyalty to this institution. He had three great passions, and one of them was his Alma Mater.—R. D. W. C. '99.

W. N. Everett Succeeds Colonel Grimes

Satisfaction of an unusual sort, which is shared to the fullest by THE REVIEW, is felt by the University in the appointment, by Governor Morrison, of W. N. Everett, '86, as the successor of Col. J. Bryan Grimes as Secretary of State. For years, as a member of the Board of Trustees, and particularly in the last two years as a member of the Trustee Building Committee, Mr. Everett has rendered the University conspicuous service. Similarly, as a member of the legislature, Mr. Everett has established a record as a most effective legislator, and North Carolina can look forward to his incumbency of office with the absolute assurance that it will find in him a public servant of the finest type.

The Medical School Situation

The Board of Trustees of the University held their regular January meeting in Raleigh on Thursday, the 25th, at 11 o'clock. The principal matter under discussion was that of the proposed medical school. A delegation from Charlotte was heard which presented Charlotte's offer of a hospital and grounds valued at three quarters of a million dollars and an annual appropriation of $50,000 for maintenance. In the event Charlotte's offer was not accepted, the delegation urged that the Trustees hear the offers of other North Carolina cities and proceed at once to the establishment of a sorely needed medical school. The Board also received the majority and minority reports of the committee appointed in June to study the medical school situation. The majority report, supported by four of the members, favored Durham. The minority report, supported by two members, favored Charlotte. The only practical result of the discussion, which continued from 11 o'clock until three, and from 8 till midnight, was the enlargement of the committee by the addition of Josephus Daniels, R. O. Everett, and J. J. Parker, who, with the original members, are to arrange another meeting of the Board to be held on February 6th at which time delegations from other cities will be heard. It is the hope of the Board that as a result of this meeting a site may be selected and a plan for the establishment of the school may be adopted for submission to the legislature. The sentiment of the meeting, as far as it can be said to have crystallized at all, was in the direction of proceeding at once with the location and equipment of the school by the University, irrespective of any proposal hitherto made.

An Important Athletic Announcement

An announcement concerning the future of athletics made by Graduate Manager Woolen in which alumni will find great satisfaction is that contracts have been renewed with William and Robert Fetzer whereby they will continue to have charge of the athletic program of the University for the next five years. The arrangement has been concluded by the Athletic Association and it is contemplated that as a result of the renewal of the contracts not only will attention be given the direction of the teams, but particularly attention will be given to the participation in some form of athletics of every member of the student body. Under the new contract Robert Fetzer succeeds William as Director of Athletics, and will have charge of the general athletic program in which the entire student body will be involved. William Fetzer will confine his work principally to the coaching of the varsity teams.

THE REVIEW has previously expressed its appreciation of the fine, intelligent service which the University has received from this athletic directorate. With the new rules adopted by the Southern Conference providing for a strictly amateur athletic program, and with the Fetzer brothers in charge, the campus may confidently expect an athletic development which is sound, intelligent, and in keeping with the best of the University's traditions.

The Way Libraries Grow

From Public Libraries for January THE REVIEW copies a note concerning an additional gift from a member of the board of trustees of the University of Michigan to the library of that institution:

"W. W. Bishop, librarian of the University of Michigan, who has been in Europe on a purchasing tour for the university, reports that he has bought the Vignaud library, composed of 20,000 volumes and a large number of pamphlets, maps and charts. Two-thirds of the library is devoted to literature and history and is intended to be added to the Clements historical collection at Ann Arbor. The purchase was made possible largely through the generosity of W. L. Clements of Bay City, Michigan, to whom the university is already indebted for the library of Americana which is valued at half a million dollars, as well as the magnificent building which will house the collection, costing about as much more."

This excerpt is interesting for two reasons. First, it emphasizes the timeliness of purchasing books abroad. Exchange rates are unusually low and hundreds of libraries which contain publications that must be secured second-hand have been thrown on the market. Libraries which fail to secure them now will not have the opportunity to secure them again at any price. It is interesting for the further reason that it illustrates what a splendid service an alumnus or member of the board of trustees can render not only an institution, but a state and country. The Clements library of Americana is one which adds special distinction to a university that has few equals in the country and cannot be overlooked by any scholar whose work relates to the early history of America.

We Remind You of June 10-13

When this copy of THE REVIEW reaches you, fellow alumnus, particularly if you happen to be of the class of 1898 which is planning a big 25th anniversary this commencement (or another class holding a reunion in 1923) the snow may be lying thick on the ground, and your thoughts may be far away from the grass and the oaks, and the old well, and the bell tolling away in the tower of Old South.

But come another day, and the crocuses and the jonquils will be popping up, the spiraea and the iris will be aglow, the roses and the woodthrush will have come, and then—June!

By way of reminder, we set down the dates here—June 10-13. And on another page, two of them, in fact, to quicken your memory, we reproduce pictures of faces and scenes of the happy days you spent here twenty-five years ago. And we bid you—come!

WORD FROM LITTLE OLD NEW YORK

Carolina men in New York are preparing to get together to organize formally an alumni association. The date is February 9th and the occasion will be a dinner at the Aldine Club, 200 Fifth Avenue. Those concerned will please take this as final notice and be present. An organization committee composed of George Gordon Battle, Junius Parker, Alfred W. Haywood and Robert W. Madry has sent letters to all alumni on the regular list. This list, however, is not complete and alumni will greatly assist by sending names and addresses to Robert W. Madry, 548 Riverside Drive, New York City. An interesting program is being planned and there may be some surprises.

The University has in New York more alumni than in any city outside North Carolina, and they have played a prominent role in the making of local history. Circular letters requesting a summary of their activities have been sent all on the regular list for New York State, and answers to these and information to be obtained at the alumni dinner will be used as material for an article to appear in THE REVIEW for March.

Meanwhile, note may be made of the recent activities of some of the New York alumni. Edward Locke Williams, formerly with the law firm of Cra-vatti & Henderson, has recently been made a partner in the firm of Cotton and Franklin.

L. Ames Brown, formerly a Washington newspaper man, is now with the advertising firm of Thos. F. Logan and Co., 680 Fifth Avenue. "Coach" Thos. G. Trenchard is living at 99 Meserole Avenue, Brooklyn. Sidney A. Blackmer, who starred last season in The Mountain Man, is again taking the leading role in a Broadway production. Harvey Campbell and his side-kick, Ralph D. Williams, both of '19, are with the Guaranty Trust Company.

Alvah H. Combs, '17, is with a prominent Wall Street law firm. His brother, Joe, '24, is taking medicine at Columbia University. John M. Gibson, '19, editor of School News, is on leave of absence in Europe. He finds at present that German marks are much cheaper than dollars. Philip Hettleman, '21, is with the firm of Ames Emerich & Co. Kameichi Kato, '18, who has returned from Japan after marrying a Japanese girl who was graduated from Elon College, is head of the New York offices of the Kuhara Mining Co., Ltd. He lives at 520 West 114th Street. William Clark Doub-Kerr is an instructor in French in Columbia University.

"Bill" Folger, who carried Carolina to victory over Virginia at Richmond in 1916, is winding up a course in the School of Journalism at Columbia. M. R. Dunnagan, '14, city editor of the Charlotte Observer, now on leave of absence, is attending the School of Journalism and "doing" New York incidentally. Jonathan Daniels is taking law at Columbia. Lucius H. Ranson, Superintendent of Public Welfare for Mecklenburg County, is here on a year's leave for study. John Terry, '18, is editor of School in Gibson's absence and is also taking Ph.D. work at Columbia.

NEW METHODIST PARSONAGE COMPLETED

On the site of the old Carr home next to the west corner of Franklin and Columbia streets, the Methodist Church of the village has recently completed a beautiful new parsonage as the first unit of the enlarged building program for Chapel Hill of the Methodist Conferences of North Carolina. The building is of colonial style, of common red brick, laid in Flemish bond and raked joints. It has the conventional entrance porch, and porches at the east and west ends connected with the front porch by uncovered brick terraces, with flower boxes built into the buttresses of the steps leading to all three of the porches. Large windows, glass doors, and three small pointed dormer windows across the front slope of the roof carry out the colonial idea.

In addition to providing a home for the pastor, one of the chief purposes of the building is that of furnishing an attractive center for the Methodist students in the University. The first floor is splendidly adapted to this purpose, and already a general reception to the student body, a dinner for the men of the local church, and meetings of large groups representing various interests of the student body and congregation have been held in it. Its appointments and furnishings have been selected with the utmost care and taste, and altogether it is furnishing a most delightful home atmosphere.

THE PRESIDENT'S REPORT

Some Facts and Figures You Should Know in the President's Report

Two hundred and thirty-nine more students than one year ago. 427 more than two years ago.

Expected increase in next two years, at least 500.

Completed in last two years: Four dormitories, housing 480 students altogether; Saunders Hall, a classroom building for history, commerce, economics, rural social science, and public welfare; 14 residences for faculty; reconstruction of Memorial Hall to make it a good auditorium; a railway spur into the rear of the campus; heating, lighting, and sewerage extensions; a laundry that takes care of all University work; various smaller projects.

To be completed: Murphey Hall, the languages building, within a few weeks; Manning Hall, the law school building, in the spring.

Bequest of $50,000 to University by Robert K. Smith.

Kenan Fund law suit won by University in courts of Kentucky.

Enrollment in graduate school doubled in ten years, now 279.

University elected a member of American Association of Universities, a body made up of 24 leading institutions of the country and including, in the South, only the universities of North Carolina and Virginia.

Number of high school graduates in North Carolina doubled from 1916 to 1919, and doubled again from 1919 to 1922. Will reach between 5,000 and 6,000 this next summer, creating great pressure upon the University and the colleges of the State.

Minimum needs of the University in next two years: Three men's dormitories housing 360 students altogether; a dormitory for women, housing 75; 3 teaching buildings—chemistry, geology, general; a permanent water supply; renovation of old buildings; space for general student recreation and exercise; heating and lighting extensions; new water lines and sewers.

The President's Report

Many of the facts and figures contained in President Chase's report have been chronicled from time to time in the daily press and are familiar to the readers of THE REVIEW. But the report deals also with higher educational problems which are not so well known and which will appeal to every University alumnus as deserving thoughtful attention.

"Much has been said during the last few months," he writes, "regarding the question of whether too many students are going to college. The problem is one which has as yet more than academic interest for North Carolina, which has today, with all their rapid growth, less than half as many students enrolled in its colleges (including those for colored students) as has a representative Middle Western state like Iowa, with a trifle less than North Carolina's population. This State still ranks decidedly low in the proportion of its population enrolled in institutions in higher education.

"Dean Royster has expressed in his report an attitude with which I am in full accord, in stating that our problem at present is less that of decision as to who shall go to college than that of determining who shall remain in college. In other words, the University, as a public institution, must articulate with the public high schools of the State; their product is its raw material. It cannot, as privately endowed institutions may do, restrict its number of those whom it admits. It must, however, make certain that students are not allowed to remain in college as idle pensioners on the public funds. It should give every one ample time and opportunity to demonstrate that he is worthy of a training given largely at State expense, but it should not burden its rolls with those of proven incapacity or lack of worth."

Administrative Machinery Reorganized

President Chase tells of the thorough reorganization of the University's administrative machinery. A modern system of accounting has been installed. A new method of registration and the payment of fees has been worked out.

"As the complexity of the educational task of the institution has increased, it has proved necessary to leave to the jurisdiction of its various schools many matters that formerly came before the general faculty. The dean of each school has therefore selected an administrative board, whose business it is to think definitely about the problems of its particular school, and to plan for its future. In order to correlate these activities, stated meetings of the entire group of administrative officials were inaugurated this fall, and have already shown their value. Such groups as these, with definite responsibilities and intimate opportunities for managing the problem of the particular phase of university life which they represent, tend not only to facilitate the handling of routine, but is a very definite way to stimulate thought with regard to future policies and programs."

Graduate School Doubles

One of the high lights in the progress of the University, as reviewed by President Chase, is the growth of the Graduate School. This year it has an enrollment of 279 students. The report of Edwin Greenlaw, dean of the Graduate School, shows that nearly 100 research projects of all sorts are under way. It is largely achievement in research that brought to the University the honor, this last fall, of election to membership in the American Association of Universities. No institution is admitted to this body until there has been made a most careful scrutiny of its standard of work and the scholarly quality of its achievements.

"The departments of Civil Engineering and Electrical Engineering have been made a School of Engineering, which is trying out a most interesting and successful experiment for its junior students in cooperation with the industries of the State. The School of Pharmacy, as a result of recent State legislation regarding the educational qualifications of pharmacists, has increased twenty-five per cent in enrollment this year, and must be developed steadily from now on. The Law School has now its three-year course in full operation, and will take a further step forward in 1923 by requiring a year's college work as a prerequisite to its courses. The School of Commerce, with an enrollment of 400, is defining its work with clarity and is meeting a real need in the life of the State. The School of Applied Science is considering the development of a number of courses leading to applied science degrees, not hitherto offered.

W. N. EVERETT, '86

The School of Education, unfortunate in the loss of Prof. L. A. Williams, has been fortunate in the selection of Prof. M. R. Trabue to succeed him. The school is training more and more men each year for the teaching profession, and its program for the future is clear-cut. The central problem of the Medical School is too well-known to you to require discussion here. One of the gratifying experiences of the last year has been the wide-spread testimony to the effectiveness and high standards of the work of the present two-year school which has come to us from every side.

The College of Liberal Arts, the heart of the University, is enrolling this year a larger proportion of the total of University students than at any time since we emerged from the war. Dr. Howe, who served effectively as dean of the college for three years, resigned last spring in order to devote his full time to the duties of his department, and was succeeded by Dr. Royster, who brings to the office qualities which insure his success, and who has already justified your selecting him for this important post. I cannot dismiss the resignation of Dr. Howe without a word of appreciation of the fine spirit and the devotion which always characterized his work."

Needs of University Stated

The last part of President Chase's report relates the present needs of the University. He tells of the bad overcrowding, and how the influx of students from the high schools has more than kept even with the provision of new accommodations.

"The growth of the high schools of North Carolina," he writes, "is one of the most amazing chapters of North Carolina history. In 1916 for the first time the number of graduates from public high schools in the State reached one thousand. By 1919 this figure had doubled. This spring it had doubled again, reaching over four thousand, and next spring it will be between five and six thousand. Between five and six times as many public high school graduates will be fitted for college in this year as seven years ago! Such is the result of the wise policy of the State toward its public schools.

"Nor is there the slightest indication that higher education is in any way a diminishing interest to high school graduates. Last spring a careful survey made by the University, including over two thousand high school seniors in the majority of the counties of the State, showed that over 70 per cent were planning to go to college, and that over 60 per cent would almost certainly go this year. In the light of these facts, a most conservative estimate of the University's growth during the two years to come shows that we should prepare for an increase of 500 students during the period, or 250 a year.

"This means that instruction must be provided sufficient in amount and quality to maintain and, wherever possible, to improve the quality of instruction now given. It is vital that the teaching power of the University should not diminish, but should increase year by year. The average cost of instruction during the two-year period has been $227 per student. To provide proper instruction for 500 additional students is a task which, on the basis of the most careful departmental estimate, cannot be undertaken for less than $200 per additional student during the period, especially as some departments must be considerably strengthened.

"It is possible to do what should be done at this figure only because the needs of many departments, for the moment, are less for full professors than for younger men, and the slightly lower amount per student should therefore be regarded by no means as setting a precedent, but as the reflection of a temporary condition.

"The Division of Extension must be strengthened. Its funds have proven insufficient to meet the demands made upon it, nor can faculty members, burdened with regular teaching duties, with the best will in the world, care adequately for the growing demand for correspondence and extension courses. Teachers, and business men especially are demanding instruction of a character that can only be given in extension courses held at convenient points in the State, and men whose duty it is to give such instruction are urgently needed."

One of the innovations for which the President says provision must be made is a twelve-weeks, instead of six-weeks, summer session. There is an insistent demand for this from the teachers of the State.

ROY MORRIS SUCCEEDS BLOUNT, RESIGNED

William A. Blount, captain-elect of the 1923 football team, has accepted a responsible position with the Liggett-Myers Tobacco Company and will not return in the fall to pilot the varsity. Roy Morris, who has played left end for the past three seasons, and who is captain of the baseball team this spring, has been elected in Blount's place.

ALUMNI HOLD MANY HOLIDAY BANQUETS

Numerous and highly enthusiastic banquets and get-together occasions were held by alumni and students during the recent holiday season. THE REVIEW records herewith brief accounts of these meetings and banquets:

Asheville

Linking together the past, the present, and the future, Carolina alumni, students, and prospective students of Buncombe County had a gala time at their annual holiday banquet in Asheville on December 30. Thos. S. Rollins, retiring president, acted as toastmaster and among the speakers were gridiron stars of former days such as Lyle Jones, "Nemo" Coleman, George Stephens, R. R. Williams and Robert R. Reynolds, and gridiron stars of today, "Goat" Randolph and Pierce Matthews. D. L. Grant, Alumni Secretary, was present as a guest of honor and as one of the principal speakers. Others on the program were C. B. Hyatt, Marcus Erwin, Judge R. M. Wells, Robert E. Follin, visiting alumnus from Winston-Salem, T. J. Harkins, Jas. Howell, Bingham McKee, Sam Cathey, H. G. Reagan, Irwin Monk and Jack Felmet. Officers were elected: C. B. Hyatt, president; George Robertson, vice president; and C. K. Hughes, secretary and treasurer.

Charlotte

A rousing banquet was held in Charlotte on December 29 by Carolina alumni, students, and high school seniors present as guests. The attendance was more than one hundred and much enthusiasm was in evidence throughout the banquet. Hamilton C. Jones, president of the local association, acted as toastmaster and addresses were made by Judge W. P. Harding, J. J. Parker, Dr. Alexander Graham, J. R. Purser, Jr., Henry Duls, W. A. Lillycrop, and J. P. Trotter.

Clinton

The Sampson County Alumni Association held its holiday banquet at Clinton on December 29. L. C. Kerr, retiring secretary, had spared no effort to make the affair successful, and his diligence was rewarded. Fitzhugh Whitfield, who acted as toastmaster, was elected president of the association and Miss Fannie E. Vann was elected secretary. Speakers included H. E. Faison, Dr. E. G. Lee, Col. C. M. Faircloth, Dr. J. D. Kerr, Jr., T. M. Lee and Miss Fannie E. Vann.

Concord

At a banquet of the Cabarrus County Alumni Association held at Concord on December 27, L. T. Hartsell, Concord lawyer, member of the board of trustees and former legislator, was elected president, and M. H. Wolff was elected secretary.

Fayetteville

The Cumberland County Alumni Association held its annual holiday banquet on December 28 in Fayetteville at Mrs. E. J. Hale's on Haymount. The occasion was one of pleasure and profit to the forty alumni and students present. John H. Cook was toastmaster and the speakers included Col. Geo. M. Rose, Dr. J. V. McGowan, C. G. Rose, Judge N. A. Sinclair, H. T. Kelly and Robert Felton. This association is one of the strongest in the State.

Gastonia

With good feeling and good cheer reigning supreme, and with an attendance of one hundred, the Gaston County Alumni Association and the Gaston County Club held their annual joint holiday banquet at Gastonia on December 28. Present as guests were the seniors in the high schools of the county. A. E. Woltz, retiring president, acted as toastmaster and the principal address was made by Prof. W. J. Matherly, of the University faculty. Other speakers included Jas. Lee Love, of Philadelphia, a member of the class of 1884, who was the first Gaston County man to graduate from the University after the Civil War; W. P. Grier, superintendent of the Gastonia schools; H. A. Query, editor of The Gastonia Gazette; H. L. Kiser, president of the Gaston County club; S. N. Boyce, Gastonia banker and chairman of the county board of education; Rev. J. W. C. Johnson, Episcopal minister; and John G. Carpenter, Gastonia lawyer and solicitor of the fourteenth judicial district. Officers were elected: Dr. T. C. Quickel, president; R. G. Rankin, vice president; E. R. Rankin, secretary; and Thos. J. Brawley, treasurer.

Goldsboro

The Wayne County Alumni Association and the Wayne County Club held their annual joint holiday banquet at Goldsboro on December 28. Joe A. Parker, retiring president, opened the meeting but later turned it over to W. A. Dees, newly elected president. The principal address of the occasion was made by Prof. D. D. Carroll, of the University faculty. Several of the alumni, including W. P. Taylor and Leonard Epstein, made short talks. The occasion was most enjoyable to the large number of alumni and students present. Wayne County is a strong Carolina center.

Greenville

The Pitt County Alumni Association held its annual holiday banquet at Greenville on December 29, with S. O. Worthington acting as toastmaster and with Prof. W. S. Bernard, head of the department of Greek in the University and a native of Pitt County, as the principal speaker. Other speakers included Dr. Chas. O'H. Laughinghouse and F. C. Harding. The banquet was well planned and the entire occasion was most enjoyable and inspiring to the alumni, students, and guests present.

Henderson

The Vance County Alumni Association held its first annual banquet at Henderson on December 30. Twenty-four men and one young lady, Miss Aline Hughes, attended the banquet. R. G. S. Davis acted as master of ceremonies and the speakers included J. C. Kittrell, of the board of trustees, S. T. Peace, W. D. Horner, Robert Taylor, Dr. R. T. Upchurch, Rev. I. W. Hughes and A. J. Harris. Many more enjoyable banquets in the future are expected by members of this association.

Hertford

The Perquimans County Alumni Association held its annual holiday banquet at Hertford on the evening of December 29. The occasion was most enjoyable to the alumni and high school seniors who were present as guests. Among those who made speeches were Dr. T. A. Cox, Dr. G. E. Newby, J. S. McNider, D. M. Feild, Jr., Silas Whedbee, and B. F. Bray. Officers were elected: Dr. T. A. Cox, president; Dr. G. E. Newby, vice president; and Silas Whedbee, secretary.

Lenoir

The Caldwell County Alumni Association held its annual holiday banquet at Lenoir on December 29. Jas. T. Pritchett acted as toastmaster and speeches were made by J. R. Conley, F. A. Grissette, Clyde Hedrick, and Frederick Dula. Mr. Conley predicted that twenty-five years from today North Carolina would be the center of the cotton industry of the world. He urged that young men should prepare themselves to take leading parts in the development of the textile industry in this State.

Lexington

Carolina alumni and alumnae of the N. C. College for Women held a joint banquet at Lexington on December 28. Z. V. Walser acted as toastmaster and the principal address was made by Prof. E. D. W. Connor, of the University faculty. Other speakers were E. C. Byerly, H. G. West, Grady Leonard, Clyde Hunt and B. A. Livengood. Officers were elected: J. M. Daniel, Jr., president; E. S. Welborn, vice president; H. G. West, secretary; and J. R. Raper, Jr., treasurer.

Mount Airy

With Solicitor S. Porter Graves acting as toastmaster and with students of former days and students of the present time mingling together in the best of good fellowship, the Carolina men of Surry County and their invited guests held a most enjoyable banquet at Mount Airy on December 28. Dr. W. C. George, of the University faculty, made the principal address and other speakers were A. D. Folger, J. H. Folger, E. C. Bivens, Wm. Graves, W. L. Reece and Manly Llewellyn. Officers were elected: J. H. Allred, president; J. P. Hendren, vice president; and R. W. Sparger, secretary and treasurer. An executive committee was chosen composed of Chas. E. Hiatt, A. H. Wolfe, J. S. Atkinson, R. A. Freeman and O. H. Yokley.

North Wilkesboro

A pleasant gathering of the holiday season at North Wilkesboro was the annual meeting of the Wilkes County Alumni Association, which this year took the form of a smoker and was held on December 28. J. A. Rousseau presided and the speakers included Henry Reynolds, P. M. Williams, Horace Sisk, W. R. Wilkins, J. R. Weaver, L. E. Stacy, Jr., Mack Brown, Paul Caudill and Richard Deans.

Rockingham

The Richmond County Alumni Association held its annual holiday banquet at the strong Carolina center of Rockingham on December 27. W. N. Everett, Jr., president of the local association, presided as toastmaster and the speakers included W. N. Everett, present Secretary of State, Geo. S. Steele, F. W. Bynum, W. R. Jones and Houston Everett. The banquet was an inspiring occasion to the large number of alumni and students present. This association has a students loan fund with which worthy students are assisted in their quest for an education. Isaac S. London is secretary and treasurer of the association.

Rocky Mount

The Rocky Mount Alumni Association held an enjoyable barbecue supper on December 29. The committee making arrangements for the supper was composed of T. L. Simmous, L. L. Gravely and W. C. Woodard, Jr. M. R. Robbins, president of the association, was toastmaster and talks were made by Thos. H. Battle and others of the alumni present. The occasion was most enjoyable to the alumni, students and high school seniors present as guests.

Smithfield

Carolina alumni and students of Johnston County held a banquet at Smithfield on December 27. N. C. Barefoot, president of the Johnston County Club, presided as toastmaster and the principal address was made by Prof. N. W. Walker, of the University faculty. Other speakers included J. D. Parker, of the Smithfield bar, and A. M. Noble, also of the Smithfield bar, who lately assumed his duties as judge of the Johnston County recorder's court. The occasion was a most enjoyable one to the alumni and students present.

Sparta

At a meeting of the Alleghany County Alumni Association held at Sparta on December 29, R. A. Doughton, Sparta attorney, veteran legislator and House leader, was elected president and R. F. Crouse, also of the Sparta bar, was elected secretary.

Spray

The Rockingham County Alumni Association held a splendid banquet at Spray on the evening of December 28. Rev. W. J. Gordon, president of the association, was toastmaster and the principal address was made by D. L. Grant, Alumni Secretary. Among others who spoke were A. D. Ivie, Luther Hodges, Mrs. B. F. Mebane, Miss Mary Gwynn, and Elton Vest. This association is making splendid progress on building up a students loan fund. Fifty alumni, students and guests were present.

Troy

The Montgomery County Alumni Association was organized at a banquet held in Troy on the evening of December 28. Claudius Dockery was elected president and W. A. Cochran was elected secretary. Plans are in preparation to make this association of great service to the University.

Waynesville

Alumni of Haywood County met at a holiday banquet in Waynesville on December 29 with Alumni Secretary D. L. Grant present as a guest of honor and principal speaker. The actual organization of the county association was deferred until the Easter holidays, and a committee was appointed to make arrangements for a big meeting then. This committee is composed of T. L. Gwyn, W. J. Hannah, and Hugh Mease.

Wilson

The Wilson County Alumni Association was organized at an enjoyable banquet held at Wilson on December 28. Sixty-five alumni were in attendance and good fellowship reigned supreme. Judge Geo. W. Connor was toastmaster and principal speaker of the occasion. Other speakers included Lee Woodard, Giles Winstead, F. L. Carr, Dr. L. J. Smith, S. E. Leonard, J. Shepard Bryan and John T. Barnes. Officers were elected: Judge Geo. W. Connor, president; Graham Woodard, vice president; Bryce Little, secretary; and A. V. Anderson, treasurer.

Announcement has been made by the athletic authorities of the University of Virginia that Earl Neale has been secured as the successor of Thomas Campbell as football coach for 1923. In addition to having made a wonderful reputation as coach of the football squads at West Virginia Wesleyan, Marietta, and Washington and Jefferson, Neale's record of eight seasons with the Cincinnati Reds shows that he has a thorough knowledge of baseball.

THE NEW METHODIST PARSONAGE AT CHAPEL HILL

COLONEL J. BRYAN GRIMES DIES

Colonel John Bryan Grimes, for nearly twenty-three years Secretary of State for North Carolina, died in Raleigh, January 11th, 1923. He was born in Raleigh, June 3rd, 1868, of distinguished parents. His father, General Bryan Grimes, of Pitt county, was a brave officer in the Army of Northern Virginia during the war between the States, and his mother, Charlotte Emily Bryan Grimes, was a daughter of John Heritage Bryan of New Bern, North Carolina, a prominent lawyer and popular representative in the State legislature and national congress.

During his early boyhood he lived at Grimesland, in Pitt county, where he was taught by private tutors. Later he attended the Raleigh Male Academy where he was taught by Fray and Morson, two prominent classical teachers of that day. He next attended Trinity school at Chocowinity, and Lynch's school at High Point, in both of which he was taught by men of high reputation as teachers of the classics. He entered the University of North Carolina in September, 1882, and became a member of the class of 1886.

Among his classmates were many who afterwards became prominent and useful citizens in the work of developing and building up the State. They were then college boys just from home, full of hope and enthusiasm, dreaming confidently but in a vague sort of way of the time when they would bid Alma Mater goodbye and go out into the world to serve their native State. Little did any one of them dream, however, that the definite thing ahead of Bryan Grimes was a call to the high position of Secretary of State, that one of his opponents on the State ticket in one election would be his classmate, Robert L. Strowd, then of Chatham now of Orange County; and that after a long and honorable career as a public officer, his successor would be another classmate, William N. Everett, of Richmond County.

In 1900 his political party organized for the fight of its life to regain entire control of the affairs of State. The ticket was led by Charles B. Aycock, and J. Bryan Grimes was named as Secretary of State. His party was triumphant, and four times since Colonel Grimes has been nominated and elected.

As a public officer he made a conspicuous success. Careful in keeping up with every detail, indefatigable in sticking to his work, prompt in his correspondence, and most kindly in dealing with those who went to him on business, he made an ideal and consequently popular public servant.

During his years of service he was ever equal to any new demand made by the growth of business in his office. This is clearly shown by his administration of the automobile system which was made a part of his duty as Secretary of State. So well did he organize and conduct that great department that it has worked from the very beginning as smoothly as if it had been connected with the office from time immemorial.

Prior to his election as Secretary of State he had been chairman of the Democratic Executive Committee of his county, and in 1893 Governor Elias Carr made him a member of his staff with the rank of Colonel, by which title he was known all over North Carolina.

In 1909 he was appointed a trustee of the University of North Carolina and held that position continuously until his death. As a trustee he labored with the love and devotion of a loyal son of the University. He began the movement to appoint a committee on buildings and grounds which was to see that improvements on the campus should be along definite lines, and at the time of his death was serving as chairman of the Trustee Building Committee which has charge of the present program of University expansion. In fact he was a practical, constructive trustee, always looking forward toward system and order in all things connected with the University. For years he was a member of the Executive Committee of the Trustees, serving with zeal, ability, and enthusiasm.

For several years preceding his death he was Chairman of the North Carolina Historical Commission, a position for which he was eminently fitted because of his intense devotion to his native State and his interest in State and national history. He was the author of several historical publications, Abstracts of North Carolina Wills, North Carolina Wills and Inventions, and a Reprint of Bricknell's Natural History of North Carolina, which are of great value to the student of history seeking light on the laws, customs, habits, and social conditions of our State in the far away years of the past. He was an active member of the State Literary and Historical Association, and President of the North Carolina Society of Sons of the Revolution.

At the time of his election as Secretary of State he was engaged in farming in Pitt county and continued his interests in farming through life. He was always active in advancing the interests of the farmer. He was a member of the Farmers' Alliance, the State Grange, the Farmers' Union, and an active worker in the North Carolina Agricultural Society. For a short while (1899-1900) he was a member of the State Board of Agriculture, and at one time President of the North Carolina Tobacco Growers Association, and at the time of his death he was a member of the Board of Directors of the Tobacco Growers Coöperative Association, by virtue of appointment by the Governor.

He was a loyal Mason, a Knight of Pythias, a member of the Junior Order United American Mechanics, and was ever faithful in all his fraternal obligations.

He was a communicant of Christ Church, Raleigh. He was twice married and is survived by his second wife and four children.

In closing this brief sketch of the life of Colonel Grimes it may be well to quote the words of one of our prominent citizens, addressed to the writer: "Colonel Grimes is dead. I am grieved. The people have lost a faithful and most efficient officer, the University a devoted, loyal friend, and the State has lost one of its very best citizens. He had capacity, character, and courage. His loss is a blow to us."

M. C. S. NOBLE.

HEARD AND SEEN AROUND THE WELL

It would almost seem that we are getting out a new sport every time another issue of THE REVIEW comes from the press. This time it is soccer. The game is being taught the freshmen by Coach Alexander. The plan is to develop more teams after the first, from the freshman class, is thoroughly familiar with the game. Soccer and Tag Football now hold the field for out-door sports. Tag Football was finally put on the map last year by the codification and publication of rules by the Campus Cabinet. So far as a mere spectator can ascertain any number may play and any costume may be worn. Officials are not necessary. The game is very like the real thing except that tagging is substituted for tackling.

The Laundry a Big Success

Chapel Hill is ordinarily regarded as a quiet slumbering village rather than a center of industry. However, the past twelve months have seen the organization and perfection of a rather large piece of industrial machinery. A compulsory laundry fee to the contrary-notwithstanding the University laundry is today a favorite of the students and is generally regarded as the best example of efficiency the village affords.

A building costing $30,000.00; equipment $29,700.00; supplies, $2,500.00; delivery equipment $2,000.00; hot water system $2,000.00. During the last twelve months: Pieces cleaned 2,000,000; pieces lost 169; paid out for less $276.40; persons employed 65; students on pay-roll 20, earning a total of $3,000.00 a year. This little industry is such a complete model that it has even a house organ, "The Laundryette."

Now Look Pleasant, Please

Do you remember the way you once stood around in front of the gymnasium or the library and had your picture taken in all the different clubs you had accumulated during four years? Well, the same old process continues and any day now you may see shivering county clubs or bashful bedraggled cabinets, boards, fraternities, etc., trying to look comfortable, capable, or exclusive as they wait on a January day for an unbelievably dilatory photographer that cannot get himself satisfied as to the costume or expression of anyone. But never again will one have his likeness spread over so many pages of heavy shiny paper, so there is a general spirit of good humor.

Winter may bring bad weather overhead, but Coach Bob's wooden track out on Emerson Field is pounded continually by the many feet of those that have their hearts set on the honor of the State Olympic.

Fifty-fifty Is the Score

In our first chain debate honors were even. South Carolina won a two to one decision over us and we enjoyed a three to nothing over Oglethorpe. Carolina was defending the negative of a proposal to have the United State remit the allied debts. This same team will later have at least one more debate on this query. The fee voted last quarter was collected upon registration for this quarter and has made possible this enlarged program.

Self-Coaching Seems to Work

Our basket-ball team continues an unbroken string of victories. Many alumni and others know of the record of the team. However, there is a peculiar fact about this wonder-team that is not generally known. The team is coached under what one of the players called last year "the soviet system." By this was meant that most of the coaching was done by members of the team. Since the R. O. T. C. was abolished and its commandant, Major Boye, was transferred to other duties, the basket-ball team has not had what one might call a "major coach." Coach Bill was its mentor last year and while he did much to preserve the unity of the quint, most of its tactics and strategy were worked out by the players themselves. This year Norman Shepard has been appointed coach. Shepard is a class-mate of many of the players and with all his expert knowledge of the game will undoubtedly contribute much to the success of the team. However, the nature of his relationship to the members of the team is unique in the history of coaching and this year again it might be said that we will have a "soviet system." Yet appearances would indicate that the season will be another victory. One is led to wonder if this sort of thing happens very often.

Another Milestone Passes

One bright morning last week the town of Chapel Hill felt itself slip past another milestone when a plow dug into the ground over which Tankersley's Cash Store had done business for more than six college generations. The little old grey box has been moved to one side now and will be destroyed as soon as the proprietor, Will Tankersley, has moved his business into one of the two ground floor store rooms of the brick building now rising on the site of the old structure. This most recent addition to the brick fronts of main street will be forty-two feet in width and will have, in addition to the ground floor, twelve comfortable rooms on the upper floor, a welcome contribution to the housing need. This dramatic episode of progress on the main street attracted an interested audience whose appreciation was heightened by learning that the outgrown store had been erected by the present owner's grandfather, Sidney Barbee, ten or twelve years before the Civil War. A jewelry store back in 1857, a fancy grocery for the last twenty-eight years, fire-wood in another month or so—tempus fugit.

Frat and Non-Frat Grades

The Registrar's report of grades for the quarter just passed contains the following tables of interest to alumni:

Fraternity	1921	1922
Beta Theta Pi	3.05	3.45
Delta Kappa Epsilon	3.26	3.63
Pi Kappa Phi	3.43	3.74
Delta Tau Delta	3.55	3.25
Zeta Psi	3.61	3.38
Kappa Sigma	3.64	3.62
Sigma Phi Epsilon	3.65	3.54
Sigma Chi	3.69	3.47
Pi Kappa Alpha	3.72	4.27
Sigma Alpha Epsilon	3.75	3.77
Sigma Nu	3.80	3.54
Kappa Alpha	3.82	3.79
Theta Chi	3.89	3.29
Phi Delta Theta	4.02	3.86
Alpha Tau Omega	4.30	3.57

Only five fraternities made a better average this fall than in '21. All the remaining ten did poorer work this year. The fraternity men say that this bad record is due to the constantly multiplying duties of rushing freshmen during the long season. The frat's fall from grace is still further emphasized by the following comparison:

	Fall 1921	Fall 1922
General fraternity average	3.50	3.63
General academic average	3.64	3.78

While the fraternities have done much poorer work this fall the non-fraternity man has improved to such degree as to raise the general student average. The whole campus reflects the return of "normalcy." The fraternity man says he will not be able to return to normal unless "rushing" activities can be cut down.

Shades of Pettigrew and Newsome

The most powerful lever at work to raise the standard of work done is the "upper ten," that percentage of students that make the honor roll. There are 149 such folk on the campus this year and out of these 149 who average a "two" or better there are nine who did not condescend to make anything lower than a one—shades of Pettigrew and Newsome! These gods of the classroom are as follows: W. J. Coker, Asheville; J. F. Cooper, Clinton; Mabel Couch, Chapel Hill; Henry Duls, Charlotte; H. D. Parcell, Tampa, Fla.; H. G. Klingenschmitt, Lockport, N. Y. (made 6 1's in E.E.); Y. Maeshima, Tokio, Japan; C. U. Smith, Capron, Va.; Jules Welch, Waynesville.

Then, too, A. Cory of Kinston and C. F. McRae of Asheville "spoiled" their ones by making one horrible two each. Well, the old world may get demoralized and students may not study, but there are some here on this Hill that certainly are on the job.

Major Cain Goes Hunting

The admirers of Major Cain have had the pleasure of reading about the medal presented him in New York. However, that triumph is not the only proof of the Major's abounding youth. An afternoon's hunt and a nice bag of birds evidence the continued steadiness of hand and eye and the heart of youth.

Eat While They Study (?)

"Eat while you study" is the slogan of a new student enterprise, and about nine p. m. its minions sally forth for a round of the dorms. Their baskets filled with sandwiches and cake are said to be always empty by ten o'clock.

January Magazine

The campus thinks that the January number of the Carolina Magazine is the best in several years. Editorial interest in the remodeling of the Liberal Arts curriculum, a survey of the opportunities for young men in North Carolina, a defense of southern culture as being "living rather than reading," the romance of fifty millions in roads, "Wealth and Willingness Making North Carolina the Empire State of the South," and more poetry than has been seen assembled in one spot in this State for some time; these are some of the features of a good issue. It is constructive, State-wide in its interest, and unusually varied. The next issue is announced as an "Odd Number" satirizing local customs and personalities. It remains to be seen whether a good board can produce the most difficult of things, good satire. Will the number be really good or merely vindictive? Will it be a campus satire or a published accumulation of petty grudges? It's a fine editorial staff and there is universal hope that they will not be shipwrecked on this big task.—P.F. B. '16.

BUDGET REQUESTS, 1923-24 AND 1924-25

President Chase, on December 21, appeared before the State Budget Commission and presented the following requests for maintenance and buildings for the next biennium. The various items are fully explained in Budget Requests, 1923-24 and 1924-25, mailed to all alumni in January.

THE STORY OF QUINCY MILLS

Under the title of "One Who Gave His Life," James Luby has written and Putnam's has published (G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York, 1923. Pp. 490. $4.50.) the story of Quincy S. Mills, a graduate of the University in the class of 1907, who was killed in an attack on the German lines, between Château-Thierry and Père-en-Tardenois, July 26, 1918.

The letters from Mills while he was at the front give a war picture which is surpassed in vividness by few if any of the many thousands of printed reports of the great struggle. He wrote for his family, not for publication; but he was the newspaper man through and through, and his narratives bear the mark of both his reporter's instinct and his years of newspaper training.

While anybody would be interested in this volume, which contains nearly five hundred pages and is handsomely printed, it makes a special appeal to the alumnus or the student of the University of North Carolina. For Mills' life here on the campus is covered thoroughly and sympathetically. One reads of his part in college activities, and there are reproduced a number of his contributions to the Tar Heel, the Magazine, and the Annual—fledgling efforts at writing, yet giving promise of the talent that he displayed later in his work for the New York Evening Sun.

Chapter VII of Mr. Luby's book begins: "Mills was not the man to cry preparedness to other people and remain inactive himself." The present reviewer has good reason to recall this, for he knew Mills well in the Plattsburg training days. The young editorial writer of the Evening Sun was passionately devoted to the cause of the Allies and for a long time before April 1917 he was eager to see America take up arms. He asked nothing better than to do his part as a fighter. The chance came, and he did his part nobly. He gave his life.

If I had a son who was too young to take part in the war, but who was now approaching manhood, I know of no book I should rather have him read than this one. For it shows America in America's best mood. I am not acquainted with any other volume where one can see reflected so clearly the spirit that animated the country in 1917 and 1918. You don't get such a true reflection from speeches in Congress or from editorials in newspapers. They are mere bubbles on the surface. The real thing is found in the doings and thoughts of men like Quincy Mills.

RALPH H. GRAVES LEAVES THE TIMES

Ralph H. Graves, '97, has resigned from the Sunday editorship of the New York Times to go with the Doubleday-Page Company, publishers. He will have charge of their syndicate, which distributes stories, articles, books in serial form, and other features. After February 1 his headquarters will be the main offices of the company in Garden City, a Long Island suburb of New York.

After his graduation Mr. Graves stayed on in the University two years, serving as librarian and taking his Master's degree. In 1899 he went to New York and became a reporter on the Times. Ever since, except for three or four years that he spent with the Evening Post, he has been a member of the Times staff. For a long time he did reporting and copy-reading. Then he was in turn assistant managing editor, city editor, and Sunday editor.

Possibly the most notable work that he did for the Times in all these years was to captain that great newspaper's correspondents at national political conventions. His name did not appear in connection with this work, but it was known to insiders that the capable presentation by the Times of the convention news was due chiefly to his guiding brain.

He would take command of ten or a dozen correspondents at Chicago or San Francisco, or wherever the place was, and direct their every movement from the time the delegates gathered to the minute of adjournment. He gave out their assignments to them; determined what news should be played up; kept in constant touch with the leading figures of the convention; solved difficult problems of telephone and telegraph communication. It was grueling work. For four or five days at a time there would be hardly any sleep for him. The Times always came out with all the news there was—many people thought with more and better news than any other newspaper in the country.

One instance that New York newspaper men relate about Mr. Graves shows his resourcefulness. During the last Democratic convention in San Francisco some accident happened to the direct telephone wire across the continent. He got into communication with one of the high telephone officials in British Columbia, and in a few minutes his voice was going over a wire that traversed the Canadian Rockies and led through Montreal to the Times office in New York. This wire was reserved for several minutes at a stated hour just before the paper went to press every night. It enabled the Times to get absolutely the latest news.

He has become a notable figure in newspaper circles in the metropolis, being a member of the Century club, the Dutch Treat club, and the Coffee House. He and Miss Frances Griffith, of Charlotte, were married in 1906.

Mr. Graves' father, Ralph H. Graves, was professor of mathematics in the University until his death in 1889. His grandfather, John de Berniere Hooper, and his great-grandfather, William Hooper, were also members of the faculty here.

In the last six years the late J. H. Hewitt, '99, and Victor S. Bryant, '90, left bequests to the University the income from which is used to enable worthy young men to enter and remain within the doors of the University. A gift of $10,000 has been made by L. S. Holt, Jr. for the same purpose.

These men, whose service to youth will continue long after their day and generation, have chosen this method of serving. There are hundreds of other ways through which the lives of the student body of today and tomorrow can be enriched. One of these is

WITH THE CLASSES

—Dr. W. M. Richardson, who is the oldest living alumnus of the University of North Carolina save only one, writes from West Palm Beach, Fla: "Can you tell me whether Colonel Alfred Holt Carrigan, of Hope, Ark., a member of the class of 1850, the senior alumnus of our association, is enjoying good health? My own health is very good."

1880 —The late Lindsay Patterson, Law '80, a son of Rufus L. Patterson, '51, was the brother of Louis M., '79, Frank F., '86, Andrew H., '91, Rufus L. Jr., '93, John L., '95, and Edmund V., '99. Seven alumni brothers from one family is believed to be the record at the University.

1883

—The Raleigh News and Observer of January 11 carried the following account of the adjournment of the House of Representatives on January 10 in honor of the birthday of R. A. Doughton, former lieutenant governor, University trustee, and veteran legislator from Alleghany County: "Representative R. A. Doughton was 66 years old yesterday. Honors have come thick upon the grizzled warrior of the Lost Provinces in the 36 years since he came to the House in 1887, then a young man of thirty just reaching what the old timers of that day declared was the fullness of his manhood, but none of them has seemed to touch him so deeply as did the ovation that broke around him yesterday when Lindsay Warren moved that the House adjourn in his honor. Nobody seems to think of him as having birthdays. They are for children, and not for stern-faced, steely-eyed veterans of a long series of legislative battles—and victories. But when Lindsay Warren called attention to the fact that 66 years ago yesterday Rufus A. Doughton saw the light of day, tumult broke loose and for a quarter of an hour the veteran legislator was the center of an eddying tide of congratulation. Much water has run under the bridge and some over it since Mr. Doughton came to Raleigh 36 years ago. In the General Assemblies of 1887, 1889 and 1891 he became a power, but it was not until 1909 when he returned from a period of political inactivity after his retirement as lieutenant governor in 1897, that he came into his full power of leadership. Since then he has ruled the House with an iron hand, though rarely asserting his power.

'Isn't he any older than that?' a legislative fledgling asked incredulously when Mr. Warren has finished his brief tribute yesterday. He is no older than that. Eastward from Sparta the road is rough and the winter winds are harsh.
They tear into the eyes and harden them, wringing youth out of them. The Governor looks like most of his people look, only perhaps more so. He has been coming over the Gap for many, many years. But the muscles down under the weathered exterior of the Old Tiger are like steel. Take him walking across the hills of Alleghany and he will walk the life out of many younger men. There is iron in him, and he is not an old man. He will never be old, perhaps, because there are no old people in his family. Some day, twenty years hence, maybe, he may begin to feel the grip of the years, but not now.'

of Rockingham, former mayor of his home city, several times representative of his county in the General Assembly, long prominent in University councils as a strong factor in the deliberations of the board of trustees, assumed the duties of the office of Secretary of State for North Carolina on January 16, the oath of office being administered to him by Associate Justice W. P. Stacy, '08, of the Supreme Court. Mr. Everett received appointment to this office from Governor Cameron Morrison to fill the unexpired term of the lamented Col. J.
Bryan Grimes, also a member of the class of 1886, who had performed in splendid fashion the duties of this office since 1901. Mr. Everett found it necessary to resign from his seat in the present General Assembly in order to accept the office of Secretary of State.
In the General Assembly he held the important post of chairman of the appropriations committee of the House of Representatives.

—The Charlotte Observer recently said editorially: "Dr. Holland Thompson, professor of history in the College of the City of New York, back home for a brief spell after an extended absence, saw many evidences of progress in this State and was deeply impressed with the development of its industrial interests. He saw abundant tokens that North Carolina 'is soon destined to be one of the greatest States in the Union,' and if he had tarried for a while that he could have had opportunity to cover more territory, he might have arrived at the conclusion some of us hold, that it is already the 'greatest.' Dr. Thompson was particularly impressed with the educational advancement, not only at the University, but throughout every county in the State."

Five years out of college and deep in a rut

"What hope is there for me?" he asked

HE graduated in 1912 from one of the best of New England's colleges, and found a job in a big Eastern business.

For a year or two things seemed to go very well; he moved from one subordinate job to another at nominal advances in salary. Then suddenly progress stopped. After being out of college five years he lost his self-confidence, lost his enthusiasm, almost lost his hope.

One day by chance he was introduced to a representative of the Alexander Hamilton Institute. The Institute man has shared the confidences and perplexities of thousands of business men, and almost unconsciously the younger man began explaining his problem. The result of that conference is best set forth in the letter which the young man wrote two years later.

"My self-confidence increased; my earning power doubled"

"It is now two years since I enrolled with the Alexander Hamilton Institute; I call it the best decision I ever made.

Next to that is the decision to leave the corporation where I had allowed myself to become merely a cog in the machine. My self-confidence and courage have increased infinitely, and incidentally my rate of pay in the period of one year has nearly doubled. For the first time since I left college I feel that I am equipped to make real progress in business. To the Institute is due most of the credit."

The Alexander Hamilton Institute was founded by a group of business leaders who realized that modern business tends to produce specialists, but is not developing executives.

One Course— One Product

The Institute has but one Course; its purpose is to give men, in reading and specific training by the "case system," an all-round knowledge of every department of business.

By serving years in each department of business, the average man could, if he chose, gain this training by practical experience.

It's the business of the Institute to save these wasted years; to provide a more direct path to success.

35% were university graduates

Altogether more than 35% of the men who enrolled with the Institute have been graduates of American universities and colleges.

Year by year the Alexander Hamilton Institute has become more and more widely accepted as the outstanding post-graduate training in practical business.

"Forging Ahead in Business"

For the sake of creating a wider knowledge of the Institute among college men—both employers and employed—we have set aside several thousand copies of "Forging Ahead in Business," a 118-page book that tells in detail what the Institute is and does.

We should like to place a copy in the hands of each reader of this publication; the coupon below will bring your copy immediately upon receipt of your address.

A Little Field Well Tilled

Never think that your printing orders are too small for us to handle, or to submit to our expert craftsmen.

The small orders for printing, under our careful attention, will by their elegant appearance and consistent quality, attract attention to your business.

The smaller the business, the greater care is necessary to foster and keep it growing. Good printing helps to emphasize superiority in quality, and the other kind leaves the opposite impression.

Whether your printing runs into two figures or six, give it the care that will get full value out of it. Make your printing your representative.

Yours in the past, present and future.
